Saturday

Dearest Creature,

I'm perfectly well again – only mada a fuss because I was so damned angry to find a dog waiting.

Of course you shall come on Monday – ~~No~~ don't you set through measles?

Call her Vanena. I'm amused at this advance in her part – how I'm jealous.

Bales & reviews so as well.

Yours.

I do want to see you.

Friday.

I had a slight suspicion contention after telephoning to you that it was awkward for you to have us on Sunday — anyhow for me to stay the night — Servants, plans, family, anything (I only mean I'm not afraid of your not wanting me; only of what one calls circumstances.) So please say honestly. There is no reason on earth for walking this Sunday. My questions about your part can wait till you're in London. I should hate for ever to be for an instant a burden to you. And you would never offend your devoted lover more, whatever you did. except by telling her bare truth. So if there is any reason against, Ring up. If we don't hear, we shall come between 4 & 5.

Monday

I hear they never told you about the day — imbeciles. I'd bring it to Long Barn on Saturday — dear me how nice. But don't please think it ask by setting the fire. That I couldn't bear. So ask depends on your being well: if not, we don't meet till May. And I've a million million things to say, — one or two to do.

Dearest, be careful.
I'll look out a train — afternoon:
2 stay till Sunday afternoon —
oh what a pleasure ahead!

Virginia

Wednesday

My dear Vita,

The Dr. says I may go away. Would you like me to come to you for a day or two, if you are alone, before the 20th? I expect this is too late a too difficult; I only suggest it on the off chance, & the understanding that you will say honestly.

It would after Christmas be better? I am perfectly well, but they would not say so until last week.

Yours

V.W.

Could you let me have a line, as I have various arrangements to make.

Dearest Honey

This is only to send my love, which you have always by you. & to say I'm keeping Wednesday free, should there be the remotest chance of your coming. But I'm afraid not.

I get news through Doltz. Jewish. I wish I could do anything, but the only thing I can do is to be your loving creature Virginia, which I am.
